

TABLE TALK

Arriving as a custom furniture maker
has been a life-long journey

Lifetime of Learning

Growing up as the son of an Air Force officer, my childhood was filled with the hum of machinery in my father's workshop. He instilled in me a passion for tools and a deep respect for safety. Those early lessons paved the way for my endeavors as a young adult, where I dove into renovating my own home, applying the skills passed down from my father.

Fast forward several decades years, and my career took off in the world of software, where I spent over 30 years honing my expertise. However, retirement brought about a new chapter as I embraced a lifelong dream. I apprenticed at a table maker, absorbing the intricacies of woodworking. Fueled by newfound knowledge and a burning passion, I ventured into entrepreneurship, establishing my own custom furniture company.

This journey, spanning military roots, software landscapes, and the hands-on craft of furniture making, reflects the diverse tapestry of my life. Each chapter, a unique thread, has woven together to create the rich fabric of experiences that defines who I am today.

